This feeling of bitterness toward Mr. Bryan is intensified by the fact that official Washington falls to see in the calm restrain and moderate tone of the note itself any sufficient reason for the Secretary boiling his office and attacking the President. "As for Mr. Bryan's resignation, I will merely say that the people are for the President, particularly the people of North Carolina. It is my view and, I think the desire of our citizens, that this Government give earnest consideration to the acts of England in seizing our ships as well as to Germany's submarine attacks on merchant ships, but we must not confuse the two subjects. Each should be given separate and distinct attention and England's acts treated with the same firm but considerate representations as we have made to Germany."

ROME, June 11.-Hard fighting at a bridge over the Isonzo, five miles northwest of Gorizia and the repulse of new Austrian attempts to recapture Freikopel Pass, were reported in despatches from the front to-day. Gorizia is 22 miles from Trieste.

For the last twenty-four hours the battling near Gorizia has been more furious than at any other point along the Isonzo. The Italians at one stage rushed a small force across the river but its ranks were thinned by a steady machine gun fire from the Austrian trenches and forced to retire. Italian gunners opened a heavy bombardment of the bridgehead on the east bank of the river and the fight to dislodge the Austrian batteries is continuing with great violence. From Caporetto south to Monfal cone the Isongo fighting, despite the flooded condition of the valley, is resulting satisfactorily to the Italian arms, Gen. Cadorna reported to the War Office to-day. Since the general advance against the river positions began more than 1,000 Austrian prisoners have been taken.

Though they lost more than 500 in killed and wounded in a previous attempt to retake Freikopel Pass, the Austrians have renewed the struggle at that point, bringing up reinforcements.

Heavy artillery has proved useless at Freikopel and in other battles in narrow mountain passes. Light mountain pieces have been wheeled up some of the heights, but machine guns are playing the most important

The defenders barricade themselves behind defenses erected across the road at its narrowest point and sweep the road with deadly fire from the machine guns,

Against this curtain of bullets the attacking forces must hurs one body after another of troops in an attempt to overwhelm the enemy by a succossion of human avalanches.
